THE MONTH OF MAY.

Ushered in by Arlington Universalist Church, With a Pretty May Party in G. A. R. Hall.

in G. A. R. Hall.

That was a delightful May party given the children in Grand Army hall. Wednesday evening, by the Universalist church and society. The softened hazy, moonlit evening was in keeping with the sweet breath of May, so that the hour was in harmony with the season.

The dance of the little folks was a charming exhibition of the most graceful movements. The grand march, which was led by Everett Webber and Doris Whitney, with its twenty-two couples of masters and misses, was a pleasing feature of the evening.

A variety of pretty dances was given by the children, under the management of Miss Alice Homer. Mrs. Doane's orchestra furnished the music. This orchestra is under the leadership of Ella Ronco Doane, Mrs. Twisden was chairman of the committee of arrangements, with Miss Martha Durgin and Miss Florence Cobb as assistants.

Winthrop Pattee was floor manager, with these assistants: Messrs. George Peirce, Otis N. Whittemore and Frank A. Ball. The fancy dances were exceedingly well done. The entire evening was an interesting one. Refreshments were served.

William E. Wood, of the firm of William T. Wood & Co., is still in Buffale, where he is likely to remain for the next two weeks, making ready the exhibit of the firm. The firm has already shipped many sample goods.

LOST THREE.

The week's rolling in the Mystic Valley Candlepin league came to an end Wednesday evening. The 999th Artillery tied Old Belfry for the lead by taking three wins from Arlington Boat club. Arlington and 999th were tied in second place, one win behind the leader, and when Old Belfry failed to make a straight win Tuesday it opened up a chance for a tie by one of the two teams contesting Wednesday night.

The "Battery" got every game by a substantial margin, and barely missed 1300 for aggregate. Fox, of the winning team, leader in the race added his holdings by rolling up the high mark of the night—282. The score:

ROLAND SWAN ARRESTED.

Issue Warrant to Chose a Third Charged With Larceny of $5,000 from the Town of Arlington—Bail Fixed at $10,000—Swan Committed to Jail -Fire and Robbery in the Town Hall.

Arlington has been plunged into the greatest confusion this week. One of the trusted town officers has been arrested on the charge of appropriating to his own use money belonging to the town. Roland A. Swan is the prisoner. He has for a number of years been the trusted and capable assistant to Town C.erk, Treasurer and Collector B. Delmont Locke, Arlington's venerable and respected officer.

FAST AND FURIOUS

FAST AND FURIOUS.

FAST AND FURIOUS.

The events of the week have come fast and furious. Shortly after midnight Monday morning, the town hall was discovered to be on fire. An alarm was sounded and the department responded with celerity. The fire proved to be in the front portion of the top floor of the town hall. The fire started in a room which is used only for storage.

The work of the fire department was something to reflect credit on the members of the department, and inside of an hour the fire had been extinguished, the flames not getting far from the place where they started. At the first reckoning the damage to the town hall was placed at $2500, but that figure has been decreased considerably since.

He immediately called the police, and a hasty examination was made. At the first glance it appeared that about $1300 had been taken, together with four books, the cash book, the tax collector's book and two check books, partially used, one on the Faneull Hall National bank of Boston, the other on the Arlington National bank.

The news of the fire was enough to start a buzz of excitement among the citizens, but when the robbery became known the feeling was intensified to a high degree. Numerous questions were asked on all sides, with but few satisfactory replies given. Of course the first thing to be asked was who locked the safe. Mr. Locke thought that Mr. Swan did, and the latter thought so, too, These two gentlemen were the only ones to know the combination of the safe, which is rather antique in pattern and in workings.

POLICE AT WORK.

POLICE AT WORK.

The case was immediately taken up by the police. Chief Harriman took charge of the investigation and the fire marshal's office was also called into action. A hearing was held there Monday afternoon, when the following testified: B. Delmont Locke, town clerk, collector and treasurer; his assistant, Roland A. Swan; Harvey S. Sears, clerk of the board of selectmen; Chief of Police Harriman; Charles Gott, chief engineer of the fire department; Daniel M. Hooley, the officer who discovered the fire; Edward Mears, janitor of the town hall; W. H. H. Tuttle, town counsel; Edward S. Farmer and George I. Doe of the board of selectmen; Night Officer John Duff and Dr. Roy B. Young. Selectman Walter Crosby was present, but was not called upon to testify.

ARREST IS MADE.

ARREST IS MADE.

ARREST IS MADE.

After the hearing the fire marshal dropped the case altogether, and the chief continued his investigation. Later in the week he asked the assistanc of two Pinkerton detectives. Wednesday afternoon the arrest of Mr. Swan was made. It took place in this manner:

Mr. Swan has been occupying half of a double house on Water street with his mother and sister. The house is owned by Omar W. Whittemore of the board of assessors, who occupies the other half with his family. Some time during the day it was noticed in the Whittemore side that the waste water from the kitchen sink did not flow freely, and a plumber was notified.

plumber was notified.

Chief of Police Harriman was notified and accompanied the plumber in his visit to the house. It did not take long to locate the trouble and there was shortly brought to light a mass-nearly half a peck in fact-of torn paper, and it need-ed only a glance to show Chief Harri-man that an important find had been made.

Among the first papers brought to light

Among the first papers brought to light were wo checks. One was for $53, and was drawn on the First National bank of Arlington, by N. J. Hardy. In favor of the town, and was for rent. Mr. Hardy occupies the bakery on the site purchased by the town for the future town hall. The other check was for $75, and was drawn in favor of the town of Arlington, by K. S. DeWitt, on the National Rockland bank, and is supposed to be for taxes.

While this find was being made Mr. Swan had been spending some hours in Boston, where he was shadowed by a Pinkerton detective. It was considered that the evidence was now sufficient to warrant an arrest, and the police were ordered to take Mr. Swan into custody as soon as he returned from Boston.

Mr. Swan stepped off an outward bound electric car and went into the town hall. He was followed by Officer Cody, who made the arrest. He was taken into one of the town offices, and subjected to a searching examination. This, however, was entirely without result, as the accused would not talk, and absolutely refused to explain the presence of the checks in the sewer of his house or make any statement regarding his connection with the case. IN COURT.

IN COURT.

Mr. Swan was taken to his house, that night, in the hope that by being taken away from the excitement he might be induced to talk about the case. Patrolman Cody accompanied him to his house and stayed with him all night. The effort was useless, for he refused to make any statement, whatever.

Thursday morning he was taken to Cambridge, and arraigned before Judge Almy in the district court. The events of the day and night had worked upon him with terrible effect. He actually appeared to be older by a score of years. He wanted to waive examination, after pleading, and let the case go over to the higher court.

Judge la'my, however, preferred to have a preliminary hearing, and set next Friday as the date for it. He fixed the bail at $10.000. Mr. Swan seemed to have little interest in the case and said that he would not attempt to secure ball. He was committed to jall, where he still remains. He is without counsel.

LATER DEVELOPMENTS

There have been a number of development since the arrest was made. Chief Harriman continued his search in the Water street house and found additional checks and other papers in the sewer. In the furnace, also, he found what is thought to be a portion of one of the town books.

Throughout all this time Mr. Swan has maintained a silence in regard to the case. When questioned by the officials he refused to give any information, whatever. He will not even admit that he has committed any crime. He says: "They say that I have done it."

His silence makes the straightening out of matters all the more difficult. It is hard to ascertain what amount is missing. The original $1300 has been increased considerably, and all sorts of outlandish sums have been suggested,

RUMORS,

Many features of the case are of such a nature as to be more or less visionary. They can be taken for what they may be worth. Mr. Swan is said to own a house at 65 West Newton street, Boston. This may or may not have cost him money. It is said that he received it in return for shares in the Imperial Smelting Co., of Jophin, Missouri, the shares not costing him anything originally. This company is one in which Mr. Swan is said to have been interested. It is also said that other citizens of the town have invested in the company, and there are rumors that they may lose what they have put into the scheme. Another feature of the case which has not been verified is that Mr. Swan had more than an ordinary interest in a Boston woman, in addition to the Arington young lady to whom he is engaged to be married.

THE OFFICE FORCE.

The town clerk, B. Delmont Locke, is a man of the highest character, and under the present somewhat peculiar state of affairs has the sincere sympathy of every citizen. Mr. Locke is 73 years old, and has been town clerk for the state of th 25 years, each year being elected without opposition by a highly complimentary vote. Mr. Locke is under bonds of $50,000. The board of selectmen have no direct authority over the office of the treasurer and collector, as it is an elective one.

tive one
Roland A Swan is 43 years of age un Roland A. Swan is 43 years of age, unmarried, and lives with his mother and sister on Water street. He has been employed in the treasurer's office for about eight years, and has done a large part of the work since Mr. Locke's health has falled. No bond is required of the assistants in the treasurer's office, H. S. Sears's duties are chiefly with the board of selectmen as their clerk. He understands the duties of the treasurer's office, but has nothing to do with locking or unlocking the safe. He is 55 years of age, and is a recent addition to the office force.

WHAT THEY SAID.

WHAT THEY SAID.

WHAT THEY SAID.

Treasurer, Collector, Town Clerk Locke talked freely about the matter. "Saturday," he said, "we closed the office at noon. My impression is that Mr. Swan locked the safe and handed the keys and combination to me. Usually on Saturday he retains these keys, because the selectmen always meet Saturday evening, and it is necessary to get at the books. He told me, however, that he would not need them last Saturday, and would come to my house after them if he did need them. I kept the keys, and this morning used them on the safe, finding that the locks worked all right." "How much money was left in the safe?" was asked. "As near as I can tell about $1300."

was asked. "As near as I can tell about $1300."

E. S. Farmer, chairman of the board of selectmen in speaking about the robbery, said he doubted if the safe was locked on Saturday when the office was closed. Assuming that it was not locked, the money would have been accessible to a number of men, including members of the board, the janitor and those of the clerical staff of the office who had keys to the office doors. But the thing that looks most peculiar with the books, and it is the count the town officials the most anxiety.

When Mr. Swan returned from the inquest, he refused to say anything about the robbery or the safe, or anything in connection with the affair, except that he first knew of the fire at about 6 o'clock Sunday morning.

Mr. Sears gave what information he could about the affair, but his testimony was not required at the hearing.

One of the witnesses summoned was Dr. Roy B, Young, who was called to Mr. Swan's house about 10.30 o'clock Sunday evening. Dr. Young found Mr. Swan in an exceedingly nervous condition.

in an exceedingly nervous condition. To relieve him he prescribed narcotics or something of that sort, to induce sleep.

A BAD MESS. A BAD MESS.

It is quite certain that since the first of January a large majority of the tax-payers have paid their money—the sum total would be in the neighborhood of $160,000—but meantime the town has been meeting its expenses right along, so that there is no definite way of determining how much money should remain. How long it will take to find out is a matter of conjecture only.

long it will take to find out is a matter of conjecture only.

If the collector's book or the cash book is not found, it may be necessary to hire men to go about from one taxpayer to another and to ask each to show his receipt, indicating that his taxes are paid. If he has saved it, well and good: if not, there will be no other way than to pay it a second time.

A CHANGE WANTED. Many opinions have been expressed, during the past few years, that, in view of the largely increased business of the town, the addition of new departments and other matters, a younger man should be in charge. The town, appreciating the long years of service of Mr. Locke, did not desire to supersede him in office. n office.
At the adjourned town meeting, March

At the adjourned town merting, as to 25, a vote was unanimously passed calling for a complete reorganization of the c'erical department of the town. A committee comprising Selectman E. S. Farmer, William G. Peck and E. S. Fessenden was appointed to investigate and see that the provisions of the vote were made operative as soon as practicable. The committee has done much work already and is still at work.

FEELING IN TOWN. The feeling that exists in Arlington is not the same in all quarters. There are those who have only blame for the man who has been arrested. Those who knew him closely, however, are filled with pity and sorrow. They prefer to remember Mr. Swan as an accommodating gentleman and a kind-hearted friend. They are inclined to be more than lenient with him

Mrs. Swan. mother of the arrested one, is in a pitlable condition. She is more than 80 years old, and is terribly stricken down by the great shock which has come upon her. Town Clerk Locke is standing up under the strain much better than had been expected.

THE INSURANCE.

George Y. Wellington has settled on behalf of the insurance companies he represents with the town of Arlington for the damage done the town hall by the fire, by paying $1393.25.

Arkansas City: "The temperance women have pledged themselves to boycott all merchants who do not favor law and order." Hiawatha: "Much good liquor was spilled here to-day without the aid of Mrs. Nation." There was no joint-smashing in this city (Clyde), but the jointists got frightened and closed, and it is now as dry as the Sahara desert.

At Topeka (the state capital) some of the jointists who had closed recently began to show signs of activity, when the citizens' committee ordered them to destroy their liquor or send it out of the city. At their request, a judge issued city. At their request, a judge issued an injunction restraining jointists from when Kansas people get aroused they act forcibly and effectively. A Kansan away from home on business received the following telegram: "Your mother-in-law is dead; shall we embalm, cremate or bury?" He replied: "Embalm, cremate and bury: take no chances." So cremate and bury; take no chances." So the people of Topeka took no chances, but ordered the jointists to shut up, move out, and then enjoined them not to sell.

Another instance of the vigorous and thorough way things are done in Kansas: A down-east Yankee came here to buy a farm. The day after his arrival, his wife received a telegram: "Your husband was killed this morning by a cyclone." She replied: "Forward the remains." The answer went back "There ain't no remains."

A genuine cyclone is no joke. Trees are often removed, root and branch, and never again seen. Small bodies of water are scooped up and carried away. A farmer told me that, after a cyclone, he found one of his horses, dead, and wound up, over and over, with barbed wire from the fence.

The most important and far-reaching result of the joint-smashing crusade is the stirring up of the wise men at Topeka—the state legislature—who have passed a bill strengthening the prohibition law. Under its provisions, proof of sale is not necessary to secure conviction. Possession, or a United States revenue to sufficient evidence.

This is the claim made by Mrs. Nation when she began her crusade. Jointists did not at first dare to prosecute her, and policemen allowed her to go unmolested. But a little reflection convinced the authorities that she and her legal advisers were wrong. Mrs. Nation's work is not confined to joint-smashing. She preaches, lectures, harangues the crowds on the streets, and admonishes jointists wherever she finds them. "For a Republic We Must Have Men."

For a successful business there must be buyers. A well equipped store, a well assorted stock of goods, efficient clerks, all attract buyers; but no matter what the store, no matter what the stock, no matter how agreeable or efficient the help, buyers will not be attracted unless they know the facts.

Telling the facts in regard to your business is advertising. That method which will tell them to the largest number of prospective buyers is the best method.

It is obvious that the best method of telling the facts to the buyers of this community is through the advertising columns of this paper. Are you employing this method to the best advantage?

THE NEW WEDDING GOWNS.

Silver Garniture the Leading Fe ture of This Season's Styles.

Wedding gowns are modeled after that of the queen of Holland, which brought silver so prominently to the front. Vogue illustrates some of the season's new bridal attire, as here shown, and tells that the skirt of the royal gown, with its long train, is a thing of great beauty, open in front, showing a plisse tablier of maline crossed 18 inches from the bottom. with a narrow garland of orange blossoms, while below it are fringe trails of the same a few inches apart. The skirt is again opened for about 20 inches only at the sides, turning the front sides at the foot into a rounding panel, and in this opening is seen a fan of plaited maline.

The queen's gown was made of silver cloth of the finest weaving imaginable, and the border edge of the skirt openings and the bottom were embroidered in silver, the design orange blossom vines. But in white satin the effect would be equally charming, with only a slight silver embroidery.

The queen's bodice was covered with silver embroidery, and a long spray of orange flowers crept up on the left side to the shoulder, where the decolletage was a filmy drapery of tulle drawn down into a point in front.

The wedding gown sketched is of white satin over white taffeta. The taf-

The circular satin drop skirt has a narrow panel of tucked white mousseline de soie down the center of front edged on either side with a tiny mousseline ruche. Many rows of the mousseline ruches trim the skirt above the hem.

The waist fastens at the back. It is close fitting with a little fullness in the front, which blouses over the soft satin girdle. Yoke, stock and sleeves are of the tucked mousseline. A graduated ruffle of accordion plaited chiffon, edged with a ruche and headed with a point lace garland design, outlines the yoke. A design on the sleeves continues the line. An empire drapery of brussels point lace falls from under the accordion plaited ruffle to the hem of the train. Orange blossoms hold the

The bridesmaid's dress is of daffodil yellow panne satin over white taffeta. The circular taffeta foundation is en traine and finished with plaiting of white chiffon edged with lace.

The circular drop skirt of panne satin has a curved banding of finely tucked white mousseline de soie inserted at the heading of the graduated circular flounce. The flounce is bordered with four narrow chiffon ruffles, and a row of steel and silver spangled lace is placed above. Fullness at the back is in an inverted plait.

The bodice fastens at the back, is close fitting, with slightly bloused front and pointed front and back. The yoke and sleeves are of brussels point, the bertha of yellow chiffon with frill on the edge and draped with a chou at the left side. The spangled lace belt has yellow chiffon sash ends at the front trimmed across with two narrow ruffles. The picture hat is of black tulle. velvet and black ostrich plumes. A Popular Color, but Capricious. Gray is in a way a capricious color. It is devoted to its friends and cruel to its enemies. Its enemies are the women who wear grays that they should not grays which stand out aggressively on the woman while the woman is aggressively ugly or sinks into insignificance in the gown. The woman with youth and a fine skin can wear any gray. It is exquisite on a blonde, bringing out all her delicate tints, and equally effective with the brilliant hues of the brunette. The woman with Titian hair and red brown eyes is glorious in the right shade of gray. For the 99 out of 100 women who are neither beautiful blondes, brunettes nor Titian maidens gray must be chosen with tender consideration.

Hominy Puffs. One cupful of cold boiled hominy, one cupful of milk, half a cupful of white cornmeal, two eggs well beaten and a half teaspoonful of salt are needed in making hominy puffs. Beat the hominy into fine flakes with a fork, add the milk, salt and eggs, stir in the enmeal, then bake in a very hot oven

A Child's View.

A little boy woke very early in the morning, as little boys will. As the time to vote was approaching and as the little boy was much interested in the presidential election, he began an earnest conversation with his mother, who was his dictionary, his Bible and all his unstudied textbooks.

"What 12an will you vote for, mamma?" he asked.

"I can't vote, Paul," replied his moth-

"Why can't you vote?" "Because I am only a woman, and the men won't allow the women to

The little boy was very wide awake and very angry. Although there was nothing in his mind nobler than a man, he purposed to do some pretty bad things in general to men. After awhile he said:

"Tell me some of the reasons why women can't vote, mamma."

"There aren't any good reasons," said mamma.

"Well, tell me some of the bad reasons," he persisted.

Here the conversation ended. I fancy the mother concluded the child's mind was too free from prejudice for any reasons, good or bad, to appear to him logical.-Woman's Journal.

The Fashionable Fan.

The newest fan is a revival of the old time Watteau model and is very small. The designs painted on satin, silk, gauze and lace are the more expensive, but even those on the cheaper fans are often exquisite. The fan has the scene with the figures and flower gardens, green trees and tinted skies painted on its face and the clouds. trees and greensward reproduced on the back, only omitting the figure and flower beds.

Then there is another model—a tiny Watteau medallion set in the midst of most exquisite sprays of mignonette, clusters of violets, with here and there a dainty colored butterfly or a bespangled bird.

An empire fan in one of the shops was of black, red, white or dark green gauze, with lace figures and designs over it, outlined with tiny spangles which caught the reflection of the lights and threw out iridescent rays as the fan was waved to and fro.

Most costly of all are the weblike affairs of honiton with a plain medallion in the center, upon which is exquisitely painted a Watteau scene.

The Sewing Apron Again. The sewing apron is not new, but it is undergoing a decided revival just at present. It is made of any strong material, and, unlike the chafing dish apron, it is made straight and plain and gathered into a plain, narrow band.

The apron itself is cut long enough to reach almost to the hem of the gown. Then it is turned up straight across just about level with the knees, as though for a very deep hem, from nine to ten inches deep. The turned up portion is hemmed before being folded, however, and the big, wide pocket thus formed is stitched up and down so as to form four or five deep, rather narrow pockets instead of one.

These pockets are for scissors, threads, patterns, cuttings, and so on. All the varied impedimenta and paraphernalia of either hand or machine sewing are thus kept handily about one.

The sewing apron may be trimmed in

A Progressive Club.

The Fortnightly Musical club of Cleveland, which will be the hostess the first week in May of the National Federation of Musical Clubs at its second biennial musical festival, is one of the most flourishing clubs of its kind in the country. The total list of associate and active members is close upon 700, making the club one of the largest musical clubs in the United States. From the first its promoters have worked for a high standard, and to become an active member it is necessary to pass a difficult and exacting examination. Six years ago the club brought to Cleveland a fine violinist, whom it has since kept there at a good salary. By this means the whole city has benefited, as, through the club's courtesy in contributing its violinist, a string quartet of wide reputation was completed in Cleveland. The president of the club is Mrs. J. H. Webster, an accomplished musician and a notably able executive officer. Mrs. Webster is the head of the local board for the reception of the biennial visitors.

Lady Pauncefote's Portrait.

A handsome portrait of Lady Paunce fote, wife of the British embassador. has just been completed by the celebrated English artist, Mr. Henry Floyd, who came to this country few years ago after many years of study under the best masters in Paris. The portrait was painted in the embassy on Connecticut avenue and has only been privately exhibited. It is graceful in pose, natural in attitude and harmonious in composition. The color scheme is restrained and eminently suited to the subject, while the flesh tones are remarkable for their purity. The face is dignified in expression and is an excellent likeness of Lady Pauncefote.

The costume portrayed is a white satin dress, which, it is interesting to know, was worn by her ladyship at one of the last drawing rooms of her late majesty, Queen Victoria,

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by Which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Noxious Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that Drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men. WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!!

CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!!

This remedy is in no sense a postrum.

This remedy is in no sense a nostrum but a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the know-ledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued of their own free will. DO continued of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of everybody a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 and $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. ELECTRIC SPLENDORS OF THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

Magnificent Spectacles and Beautiful Effects to Be Produced-The Great Electric Tower the Climax of the Illumination Scheme.

Utility is the first point to be aimed at in lighting the Pan-American Exposition. When Old Sol ceases to furnish light to guide the visitor and reveal the wonders of the Exposition, a substitute must be provided. In providing this substitute an opportunity is offered to produce beautiful decorative effects, and this is the second point to be aimed at. Decorative lighting may serve to be of utility in lighting up an area.

In providing for this double purpose of utility and beauty it must be constantly borne in mind that the supports for the lights shall not be obstructions in the daytime or be out of

In the Fountain of Abundance, at the foot of the Court of Fountains, the motion will be rapid, giving the effect of a great quantity of water, as the name implies, in order to complete the parallel of effects of light and water. The basin of the Court of Fountains will be filled with large jets of water thrown vertically and called pillar jets, all illuminated with circles of incandescent lights taken up by the projected water and will be again reflected on the surface of the basin by the water in agitation from the falling drops.

LIVE BEE EXHIBIT.

Gathering and Storing Sweets at the Pan-American Exposition.

The manner in which the little bee improves each shining hour will be practically illustrated at the Pan-American Exposition, arrangements having been made for establishing an apiary on the grounds. The exhibit will be novel and attractive. Bees will be shown gathering sweets from flowers and storing them in cells in glass hives. This sight will be interesting to all Exposition visitors and entirely new to perhaps all but about 1 per cent of the whole number.

Each state or section of country produces several different varieties of honey, and honey produced in one locality may be vastly different from the product of another. In making an exhibit of this character proper attention should be given to the classification of the different varieties in order to make the exhibit as interesting as possible. and this will be done in the New York division, which will show honey produced from 15 varieties of flowers, notably apple bloom, white clover, sweet clover, linden (basswood), buckwheat, golden rod and some others, the honey from these sources coming from those parts of the state in which the respective flora is most abundant. AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

Display Will Be High Class and Com pletely Representative-Only Original Productions Will Be Shown. Best Artists Will Send Canvases.

The general idea to be carried out in the exhibition of Fine Arts at the Pan-American Exposition is to make a completely representative and very high class exhibition of American art which will include works executed within the past 25 years-1876-1901.

The works of which the exhibition is to be composed are classified as follows:

Group 1.—Paintings in oil, water color, pastel and other recognized mediums; miniatures, cartoons.

Group 2.-Sculpture, including medals and cameos.

Group 3.-Drawings, etchings, engravings, black and white or monotint paintings in oil or water color. Group 4.-Architecture.

All works in all classes must be original productions, and no copies of works of art, whether executed in the same medium as the originals or in different mediums, will be accepted.

The exhibition will be made up in great part by direct invitation, thus securing from artists and owners the most notable and excellent works, and these will be placed in groups.

Our purpose is to realize at the Pan-American Exposition the project of an American salon-never yet completely carried out-in which will be made apparent the reasons for the high rank in the fine arts now held by the United States in the world's estimation, as exemplified by our triumphant success at the recent Paris exposition and as shown in our annual exhibitions under the auspices of the various professional art societies in New York, such as the National Academy of Design, the Society of American Artists, the American Water Color Society, the New York Water Color Club, the Architectural League, the National Sculpture Society, the Ten American Painters, the Society of Landscape Painters, etc., and at the annual exhibitions held at Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St.

BEAUTIFUL SETTING OF THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

How the Grounds Were Transformed Into a Beautiful Park Filled With Tall Trees and Dotted With Flower Beds-Twenty-five Acres In Lawns.

As was the case at the World's Columbian exposition in Chicago and other expositions, the Landscape Department, consisting of three departments-Landscape, Road and Miscellaneous departments-usually begins with the preliminary work; so were in the same manner preparations made under the view, the site selected is an ideal one, considering that the main front adjoining Delaware Park, from which a magnificent entrance of convenient access is offered, and, furthermore, that the whole tract and the surrounding lands were entirely free of undesirable buildings and other objects. The grounds to be occupied by the Exposition contain 206 acres, with an addition of Delaware Park of 1081/2 acres, representing a total area of 3141/2 acres.

this matter up with the different Grange officials in the various states and also with the National Grange. A Pan-American Grange Committee has been appointed in every state, with the state master as chairman of such committee. These committees are working assiduously in their own interests as well as the interests of the Exposition, particularly with reference to the divisions that are of the greatest importance to them.

The plan is to run frequent excursions from the various states where the order is strongest, and this is particularly true with reference to the Eastern, Middle and Central Western states. At a meeting of the New York State Grange held at Poughkeepsie a resolution was passed placing in the hands of the Executive Committee of the State Grange the matter of caring for the headquarters established on the Exposition grounds and of assisting the different committees whose duty it is to impart such information as shall be of interest to the visiting members of the order and receive them in such a way as shall reflect great credit upon the hospitality of the New York State Grange with reference to the visiting members In Vother states.

The building from an architectural standpoint compares very favorably with the style of architecture which manifests itself in the various buildings of the Exposition. The plan of the building is such that the main floor is devoted to a large reception room, with smoking room, offices and checkroom conveniently located for the use of the members.

Superintendent Converse is conbeen used for farming purposes before stantly in receipt of letters from the Masters of the State Granges indicating that a widespread interest is being manifested in this matter.

The sessions of the juries for the different groups will be held in New York city and Buffalo in the latter part of March. Depots for receiving works offered will be established in both cities.

A large number of celebrated American artists reside in France, Great Britain and other parts of Europe, and the exhibit of each country will be placed by itself. The Fine Arts exhibition will thus possess in its ensemble an international character in harmony with the keynote of this Exposition which will exemplify the civilization of all the Americas.

In this manner about 20,000 yards of good rich soil were stored up for cultivation purposes.

The excavation of waterways, extending 11/2 miles, including fountain basins and East and West lakes and covering an area of about 221/2 acres, was begun at once, and this work carried through the whole winter and following summer, removing about 90,000 cubic yards of soil, the greater part of the soil gained therefrom being used for the embankments alongside the canal and for divers improvements in connection with the landscape features, as, for instance, the forming of islands, basins, terraces and bringing other parts of the grounds on elevations required for locations of buildings and approaches and establishing grades, as shown on the block plan designed by Messrs. Carrere & Hastings, architects

Considerable planting was done during the fall and winter of 1899. Especially with the object of hiding the fence from the inside view many thousand trees and bushes were planted for producing a green inclosure, essential to creating additional landscape effects. The planting in general proved to be very successful, especially of large trees from 40 to 60 feet high; also the planting of 20 to 25 acres of lawns.

During the whole summer and fall of 1900 the principal work consisted of grading of roads, walks, of which about six miles were laid out; completing waterways and improving the soil wherever plantations were to be made.

Of special improvements we may mention those around the Service

TRUE TO THE LAST.

New Hampshire is true to the last, in the keeping of her annual Fast day. We have a good deal of respect for the old Granite State in holding on with a tenacious grip to so many of the old ways of the fathers. Why shouldn't we fast and plead in a penitant way for forgiveness for our manifold shortcomings? The disposition to be set right again is a noble one. Fast day was born right under the shadows of Plymouth rock and in those earlier days it meant something -and it means somthing today in New Hampshire-at least, it keeps alive those associations connected with the landing of the Pilgrims "on a stern and rockbound coast."

While Massachusetts has her Patriots day, New Hampshire none the less has hers in her annual Fast day.

A BANDAGED HEAD.

A bandaged head more frequently than otherwise means that the devil has got the best of the man who attempted to drink his satanic majesty drunk. This whiskey drinking will beat the best hand at the game, in spite of the two bowers and the joker. We saw one of these bandaged heads the other day on the shoulders of a good fellow who had gone in to wip, but had come out the loser. Why not be a little sensible, young man, and so realize the fact before you start in that you can't play with fire without getting burned? These headaches and smashed heads don't pay. Don't forget that after these abundant rains the springs are full to overflowing, and you can't possibly drink them dry.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Baders: Since we assumed the management of the Enterprise, some of our friends have kindly come to us and told us how, in their opinion, we might improve the paper. That is all right; in fact, it is just what we wanted. Moreover, we want our friends to continue telling us how we can make a better paper but of the Enterprise. But, and this is the reason for publishing this note, we cannot follow all the advice which is given us. It is impossible to suit all the people. We will do our best to suit the majority. Meanwhile, we want the people, first, to compare the Enterprise with our contemporaries, and thus convince themselves that our paper is superior to them all; second, remember that we have been in the newspaper business at least a week or two, and that we, therefore, have some knowledge of how a paper should be conducted.

Thanking our friends for their kind and well-meant criticisms, and also their words of appreciation and commendation, and hoping that they will continue to criticise, when, in their estimation, criticism is needed, we remain,

TROUBLES THAT NEVER COME.

It is one of the most unfortunate as well as one of the most absurd facts that we worry and fret and stew over many a trouble that never comes. We are safe in saying that could the truth be known right in Arlington the majority of those who are perplexed and hardly know which way to turn are simply worrying over some imaginary trouble. They manage somehow to shadow the future. when it would be all sunlight were it not for the cloud that emanates from their own cloudy brain. And all this is the more likely to happen as one grows older in years. We have now in mind an old man and one of the best, who is at least worth a hundred thousand dollars, who is continually fearing the pcorhouse. He sees nothing before him but penury and want. We know of a woman fair to behold who is forevermore in a peck of trouble, for fear that years that are creeping upon her will lessen her facial charms. And so it we are all borrowing trouble of one kind or another. Why isn't it the better plan not "to cross the bridge before we come to it?" Why starve so ng as our table is laden with someng good to eat? Why worry over the coming wrinkles so long as our faces remain smooth? Why not be gay and happy still in spite of imaginary evils?

THE TOWN CLERK'S OFFICE.

Good friend, don't borrow trouble,

There is no one in Arlington who does not exceedingly regret that such a cloud has come over the town clerk's office. And yet, unfortunate as the affair is likely to prove, a resultant good will come to Arlington if the lesson afforded by the irregularities which have come to light is learned by the town.

The public is yet to accept the fact in a practical way that the same coment ability is required to perform and execute the interests of the people as only get a backside view of the world. That boy ought to be spanked and sent. The heavens to them mean nothing other to bed without his supper who calls his father "the old man," and that husband fortunate in the extreme that this naturally appear when the night should be fed on bread and water who trouble should have come to the town clerk's office after so many years of faithful labor on the part of Mr. B. Delmont Locke, a man whose honesty and integrity are above suspicion. But this trouble has come to his office, and all through a sentimental fault of the town, but no less a fault although begotten by sentiment. All political economy teaches that business recognizes neither friendship nor growing age, and this is especially true in every material interest belonging to the public. It is to be hoped that Arlington hereafter shall see from WILSON PALMER, Editor. the beginning that the public trust shall never fall into the hands of an incompe tent and dishonest subordinate. The Enterprise from now on proposes to take a more active interest in the public interests of Arlington than it has heretofore and to this end these columns will in the future discuss in a manly, fearless way the material interests of our town.

THE HOME GROUNDS.

Every man and woman in Arlington should possess enough of the esthetic as to keep the grounds about the home in neat and attractive condition. The outside of the home is an educator as well as the inside, and what is more, it will be found in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred that the outside and inside of the private residence bear close relationship to each other in all that constitutes a cultured taste. The private grounds in Arlington are, for the most part, well laid out and are kept in attractive shape. A walk along Pleasant street at this sea son of the year is always a delight to one enjoying the best there is of landscape gardening. Pleasant street cannot be surpassed by any suburban street in near vicinity to Boston in all that makes up the picturesque, both in nature and in art. And the same may be substantially said of Academy and Jason streets and of Bartlett avenue. Indeed, this same is largely true of all the streets in Arlington. And then to take in the superlative, all one needs to do is to mak: his way to the very tip-top of Arlington Heights, there to behold that wonderful panorama of earth and sky. We'll venture that while our boys and girls in the Arlington public schools are attempting to learn the names of mountains in Asia, there isn't one out of ten of them who an name the long chain of mountains that may be seen to the west of Dr. Ring's sanitarium. But yet this is the way we do-go far from home to search for God's wonderful creations on mountain and in valley, remaining absolutely ignorant of all that is wonderful about us and near at hand. Teach our children first, we insist, of Arlington and all that may be seen from her lofty heights. Arlington is "beautiful of situation." and delightful in many ways. Let us residents of the town see that we do our part in keeping her one of the most attractive and picturesque localities in near neighborhood to the metropolis.

WE TAKE IT BACK.

Every impatient, growling word that we have had to say of the rainy month of April, we, this glorious Monday morning, take them all back. We ought to have known that behind the long continuous cloud, God had a wealth of sunshine with which to flood the world at just the right time. What impatient mortals we are, ready to say all sorts of ill-natured things about the weather, if it is not to our liking. We well understand at this writing how the copious rains were sent in April that the May time should come to us in its livery of green. The heavens were only weeping during those long weeks of cloud that they might the more rejoice when the sun should come with gladness in its beams. Who is he that can fitly describe such a refulgent and effulgent morning as this. "There is no speech or language where its voice is not heard." line has gone out throughout all this little world of ours here in Arlington. The birds are chanting their praises, and all Nature joins in the chorus. The ploughman who turns the clod makes merry as he turns up the deep sub-soil of his broad acres. The farmer boy whistles his note of joy in the clear, warm sunshine of these later April days. What a delightful world is this in which we live! And yet there are those who go through it blind as a bat all the while. To such as these it makes little difference whether the storm is on, or whether the sun is prodigal with its circling light. We so pity that man who has no sunshine in his heart, for, after all, the only sunshine that any of us receives is that which comes from within to meet and make welcome that which comes from the heavens above. Let us all take courage and thank God for the blessed sunshine. And then these bewitching moonlit evenings! What shall we say of them, other than they are the sisters of these not less bewitching days. We feel warranted in saying this morning that no man, or woman either, will ever hear us again complaining of the weather, for we shall now, more than ever before, appreciate the fact that behind the cloud the sun is still shining.

LIVING IN THE BASEMENT. This living in the basement when we can all live on the ground floor of this magnificent earthly temple which God has purposely planned and built for his people seems to be and is the most absolute idiocy. Not only can we live on the ground floor, but we can pass much of our time in the upper stories among the stars if we have any love and appreciation for the heavens above us There is no "spare room" in all God's universe, shut up that the carpets may not fade, and that it may be in trim condition when the minister or other visitor may call. "All God's world lies open and free and you can go where you will." And yet in spite of all this magnificence spread out on every side, there are those who persist in living in the basement. These underground folks will tell you that the greatest virtue in living is in saving things from the wear and tear of many feet. Those who live in the basement invariably go up and down the back stairs so as to save the front stairs, and they invariably go in and out the back door. The truth is, these basement men and women never see the front side of anything. They only get a backside view of the world, shuts The sun rises and down. sets for such as those only that they may know when to go to work, and when to rest from their labors. Many of us are more senseless than was the prodigal son, for he was starving to death in a far country, where there was no food save the husks which the swine did eat. But we, surrounded with all the wealth of Nature in her opulent munifience, oftentimes keep ourselves downstairs, all the while attempting to live on a crust of bread. All this resplendent universe is calling to every man, woman and child of us, that we come up from our underground prisons into the light of day, where we each may see for ourselves the marvelous things that have been wrought for us. We hope there are no Arlington people living in the base-

WHAT COWARDS WE ARE.

What cowards we timid mortals are! And when we say this in exciamatory form, we mean men and women right here in Arlington. How frequently the bravest of us skulk and hide behind each ther when the outspoken word is demanded and some duty, imperative in its nature, should be performed. The most of us are afraid of the everlasting right. The very thing we ought to do we leave indone fearing the popular, cowardly outcry. There are not wanting instances of this kind in our town that might be cited to prove our statement. A man who has been a resident of Arlington for many years, and who is distinguished for his cultured ability, said to us the other were one to boldly declare what modifications and changes should be made in the official life of Arlington, he would at once be silenced by the unfaverable criticisms that would be heaped upon him." Such a one would find himself substantially alone in a just cause And yet right is right, and finally/ it must prevail.

We with others, feel this cowaruly spirit too frequently taking possession of us. The average country newspaper cringes and "don't dare" before the eternal right, while it should prove itself an educator and a leader in all things that are just and true. "Let someone else say the word or do the deed," is the popular cry, and so the word is not spoken and the deed is not performed, and thus things go on in church. and in the political management of the town, and in newspaperdom, too, year after year, much as before. What Arlington needs is some brave, bold leader. one who is above and independent of all 'rings' and "cliques," and who will not hesitate to say the right word at the

There should be frequent changes in the political management of our town, and for this reason, if for no other, namely: Officials long in power become substantially a self-perpetuating power, in which instance they come to think or at least act as though they owned the town, and consequently no longer servants, but bosses. This is true, not only in Arlington, but in other localities as well. But we are especially interested in Arlington, so it is that we write of her. Arlington will take a long step forward in all her political rule when she has the courage of her convictions.

That was a pleasant sight to behold, hose four Arlington clergymen grouping themselves on one of our side streets in the late afternoon of Monday, engaged in agreeable conversation. All counted there were the hard-shelled Baptist, the blue Presbyterian the liberal Universalist, and the apostolic Episcopalian clergyman, and not a dissenting voice among this quartet of theology. The religious world is surely getting together in spite of the creeds.

Parents, give your children the run of the house, and if some young man calls to see your daughter, just emerging from her teens, don't you, mother, hang around watching the two. It is better that the girl of "sweet sixteen" should entertain her beardless young man in the parlor with no third person within sight or hearing, than to hang over the gate late at night whispering her "good-

Mr Horace A Freeman, 14 Court street, impresses all who meet him that he is a man who has the courage to say just what he thinks. This virtue have brought him, now and then, an unfavorable criticism, but he has come out of it all a whole man. It is said that had the committee of twentyone taken his advice upon certain important matters, the town would have profited thereby.

It is said that the west side of Pleasant street is the popular side for the pedestrian. At any rate, all those men who wear the McKinley hat take to that side, and all those Arlington women who are authority upon the latest styles in the fashionable world are very seldom seen making their way on the east side of Pleasant street.

The greatest argument in support of the "second birth" is the fact that so many men and women are not born right in the first place. They have somehow managed to come into the world feet foremost. Such as these need a second birth, that they may come into the world head foremost and with their eyes open.

Young man, before you marry, just do a little of your sparking with your best girl in the kitchen. It is more important that she should understand how to make good bread and to cook a steak than it is that she should preside gracefully at the piano, and entertain you with a lot of small talk in the parlor.

Those who heard Rev. W. H. Rider's severe criticism upon England in the address he made in the town hall on the evening of April 19, are now reading, as an antidote, Rev. Anson P. Stokes's sermon, preached last Sunday in New Haven, Conn.

Nature is always true to herself, and no trick can be played her. So why longer pretend to be young in years when old age has already a firm grip on us? Don't be afraid to tell your age and walk with a cane.

will refer to his wife as "the old woman."

Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer has raised commotion among the school-men of Boston, by declaring that the public school buildings of that city are in a dirty and unsanitary condition.

It seems now that President McKinley is to receive his LL. D. at Harvard in June. Those who have opposed his receiving such honorary degree have simpv made themselves ridiculous.

Those were elegant and up-to-date speeches made Tuesday evening by Vice President Roosevelt, and Senators Hoar and Lodge, at the meeting of the Home Market club in Boston.

Interest in the Arlington Improvement association was shown to have not abat-ed a bit, Monday evening, when 30 prom-inent citizens of the town gathered in Odd Fellows hall for the purpose of dis-cussing the question of consolidating some of the town departments.

This question came up at the recent town meeting and was referred town meeting and was referred to a special committee appointed by Moderator Robinson, and made up of Messrs. Perkins, Scannell, Porter, Winn and Bott. The discussion, Monday evening, was very general. No vote was taken, but from the remarks of the speakers it would seem that, in a general way, consolidation was favored. Specifically, the solidation was ravored. Specifically, the feeling seemed to be that the highway, water and sewer departments might be consolidated to the good of the town.

President W. A. Muller called the meeting to order, Secretary George W. W. Sears being in his place. VOLUME 1, NUMBER 9. THE ENTERPRISE IS FOR SALE BY H. V. Smith, Lexington. L. A. Austin, P. O., East Lexington. W. L. Burrill, P. O., North Lexington.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As it has been impossible, in the time allotted, for our canvassers to cover the whole territory which the Enterprise serves, we have decided to extend the limit on 50 cent annual subscriptions until June 15.

A GOOD SIGN.

We are extremely glad to see the prominent citizens of the town taking an active interest in its welfare along a little different line than heretofore. We refer to the appointment of three well known citizens as special policemen, at their own request, for the purpose of seeing that the liquor law is enforced.

Too often, nowadays, we hear the complaint, coming from well known citizens, especially in the case of a city, rather than in a town. They cry out with a wail against the way affairs are conducted. They characterize the members of their city council as politicians, who are "in it for what they can get out of

They feel sure, these good citizens, that their city is going to the dogs, and that numerous other terrible things are about to happen. Someone who hears their sorrowful tune asks them why they do not run for office, and so purify matters Their reply is that they could not think of such a thing; that to mix up with those politicians would soll their dignity and otherwise injure them.

Of course we have no such cases in Lexington, for we have no politicians in office who are "on the make," but the rule applies equally well in other directions. We have citizens who are forever finding fault with the police. The three gentlemen, Messrs. Fox, Bayley and Currier are not in that class.

They have no fear that their hands will become soiled beyond cleansing, and they are going into the police business with interest and with energy. We wish them the success which we know is sure to follow their well-directed efforts.

THE RAILROAD.

We will give, soon, a sketch of the Lexington & Boston Street R. R., which furnishes transportation to and from points between Arlington Heights and Loweli. Supt, Greene tells the Enterprise that his company intends to replace the single tracks by double tracks all along the route, as fast as franchises can be secured.

And this is the question we want to discuss. The towns along the route will be simply succumbing to the inevitable when they grant these petitions for double track locations. We are not the authorized agents of the road, nor do we think that they should be considered befere the public.

On the contrary, the public was here first and will doubtless remain longer than the road. Moreover the streets belong to the public and not to the railroad. Hence the former is entitled to the first consideration.

Notwithstanding this, it is only a question of time when double tracks will be substituted for single tracks along the entire route. This is just what has come about in other cities and towns, and it will certainly come about here.

We have in mind a case in Cambridge. The Boston Elevated Co. petitioned for tition was opposed by residents of the street and by other citizens, their arguments being that the street was too narrow and that the installation of another track would necessitate the destruction of many fine shade trees. After a full hearing before the board of aldermen, the petition was granted The objectors carried the case to the railroad commissioners, but lost again, and the tracks were laid. Now, after a couple of years of experience with the additional track, those who objected when the petition was being considered are fast losing their objection.

We do not say that this would be the result in Lexington or in any other towns along the line of this road, but we do say, and we say it firmly, that it is only a question of time when the double tracks will be put down. The company will doubtless be called upon to make concessions which it has not yet offered to do, but, as we understand the situation, they are willing to do this. The matter will doubtless be cleared up before long, though we are told that the petition will not be disposed of till another selectman shall have been elected.

TROUBLE MAKERS.

We have long ago lost all patience with these trouble-makers, whether they be Democrats, so-called Anti-Imperialists, or what. It is a vast wonder that we get anywhere at all, with all these cranks putting stumbling blocks in the First you read about a Jamaica Plain clergyman comparing the president to a dish of jelly. Last Saturday night a man disgraced his title of Hon., by saying that President McKinley was as unstable as water. Meanwhile it leaks out that the Harvard overseers intended to offer the president the degree of LL. D. And then what a tremendous outburst of protest comes from these pygmies.

To read their views on the subject one would think that the conferring of this title would disgrace the country forever and that we would never recover from the stain. These three instances are only a small number of the cases where the trouble-makers have showed their liking for cheap notoriety and their lack of

They cry out, as though in agony, against the policy of the administration, call the president a king and work themselves into a terrible passion. Meanwhile the cool and self-possessed citizens are looking down on them with feelings divided between pity and disgust.

Men who have not raised themselves to such a pitch of unnecessary excitement, are able to recall that the policy of the country at present is identical with that of a century ago. But each step forward, in the form of an addition to our territory, has been met with a cry of protest from these fanatics, or from their predecessors.

And what has been the result? The rouble-makers have gone on making themselves red in the face and injuring their nervous systems, and meanwhile the forward step has been taken by the country and before the stumbling-block manufacturers have awakened to the situation the nation has begun to enjoy the advantages of its new possessions.

This has been the invariable result and yet we hear the same old reasons, if they can be called reasons, advanced, why the nation should stand still rather than step forward. Truly, men are queer creatures. But pity is due some of them, rather than censure. Their peculiarities must be borne with and we must try to see their good side, and be blind to their faults. This may be a difficult task in many of the present instances, but it is the proper thing to do, just the

AN EXPLANATION.

Editor Enterprise: There appears to be a little misunderstanding on the ques-tion of the president's visit to Lexing-

tion of the president's visit to Lexington in June.

The selectmen received a letter from our venerable and esteemed senior senator, George F. Hoar, some weeks ago, intimating that Pres. McKinley would like to visit Lexington and Concord during his brief stay in this vicinity. As the letter was received a short time before a public meeting was held in the town hall, and as there was so large a representation of our citizens present. I thought it an opportune time to simply and briefly bring the matter before our people. After a few words by way of explanation, I asked all those present who favored sending an invitation to the president to say "Aye," and there was a grand and prolonged vote in favor of doing what we can to assist in making pleasant and profitable the visit of the head of the nation, which I believe will be an honor to our town.

As near as I could ascertain by my own observation and the opinion of those present, there were but four gentlemen present who voted "No." It is quite natural that out of so large an assemblage there should be a few people who differ somewhat, upon some questions, from the president, but, considering that Pres. McKinley is not president of any one man or party, but of every man, woman and child within these great United States, it seemed a little unpatriotic to vote "No." Every citizen present that evening was an American and had a heart in his breast that beat for American principles and the Stars and Stripes.

I was somewhat surprised that anyone should cast the slightest reflection upon

I was somewhat surprised that anyone should cast the slightest reflection upon doing honor to the one who occupies at the hands of the people the highest office that it is possible for any man to occupy on the face of the globe.

It is a well known fact that Senator Hoar has not always agreed with the president, but he will do all in his power to entertain him during his visit.

Through Senators Hoar and Lodge, the selectmen sent an invitation at once to the president to visit Lexington, and while there has been no official answer as yet, assurances have been made that as yet, assurances have been made that he will at least spend a few hours in our historic town.

part of New England known as the fishing regions, there to enjoy a period of absolute quiet.

The enjoyment, the complete retirement in which one finds himself, is the best health restorer you can find. The manipulation of hooks, nets and lines, the sight of a big, wary fish, anxious for a tussle, and the excitement attending the landing of one of these fine fellows, will drive away the blues, and every moment of the spring vacation is one of intense enjoyment.

The regions, or sections, which offer allurements to the early fisherman are several, but the most prominent and conspicuous are the Moosehead and Rangeley regions, though many sportsmen prefer the Allegash region or the territory in Washington county. Me, while others single out Lake Winnipesaukee or Memphremagog, or Sunapee or Champlain, or, perhaps, some one of the streams or lakes of the Adirondacks is the choice for the spring sport.

The Boston & Maine railroad reaches every section in which spring fishing is a predominant feature, and the pamphlet "Fishing and Hunting," gotten out by its general passenger department, whose offices are in Boston, Mass., is chock full of interesting information which every sportsman should read, and a two-cent stamp sent to the above address will procure it for you.

President Rawson then brought the subject of the evening's discussion before the meeting by introducing Representative J. Howell Crosby, who opened sentative J. Howell Crosby, who opened the discussion.

Mr. Crosby said in part: Consolidation seems to be the watchword of the 20th century. In the 19th century it was organization. Perhaps this is the logical step in advance. The Socialists find in consolidation the greatest help for their party. When you come the apply there party. When you come to apply these principles to a town, it may become a difficult principle.

difficult principle.

Rep. Crosby spoke of his privilege in sitting on the ways and means committee of the legislature, and he said that he had been struck with the fact that the head of each of the departments seemed to be so blinded in following his one specialty as to forget the general public good.

When asked if it cannot got also When asked if it cannot get along with a smaller sum, every department is very loath to reply in the affirmative. The speaker thought that if representatives of these departments could be brought logether, for the purpose of consultation, they might become satisfied with smaller appropriations.

appropriations.

It is essential that there shall be other bodies, far enough removed to see these matters in their true perspective. We have a committee of 21 for this purpose, but being an outside committee, perhaps it does not exactly fill the place. If there could be a committee made up of representatives of the several departments, perhaps it would be better.

I have not had enough experience to know whether it is well to consolidate the departments. But I am inclined to doubt its wisdom. It seems to me that doubt its wisdom. It seems to me that in a small place like this it is better to have a large number of men in office, for it results in interesting a larger number of citizens in interesting a larger number of citizens in town affairs.

George W. Perkins said there was a lack of system in the town. The departments do not seem to work together. The committee of 21 thought that some scheme ought—to be devised, whereby the departments could work more understandingly. Some of the departments have been working at loggerheads, all-tion in certain cases, as for instance the sewer and water departments. He thought it would result in a saving of expenses for teams, tools and officers. He thought the state could well be copied in this direction.

Fred S. Hicks also favored consolidation. He thought the town affairs could be consolidated into a board of about 12, which should be an advisory board. A competent executive officer could then be secured, who would not have to be a citizen of the town. He would be responsible for the work done.

W. A. Pierce said he had formed no particular idea for consolidating departments. He thought that it would be better to elect a town council, one for every 100 voters or something of that sort. This would correspond to a smaller town where three or four men say what shall be done. Mr. Pierce did not believe in consolidating boards where work did not lay in similar planes.

Omar W. Whittemore thought the town needed a capable man who could be held Omar W. Whittemore thought the town needed a capable man who could be held responsible for running the town. He wanted a sort of "superintendent of distance". Charles S. Parker said that in many instances, streets which had beer put in first class condition by the sur-veyor of highways, had been torn up by the sewer or water departments. His wanted the departments to work in har-

R. J. Hardy thought that consolidation

R. J. Hardy thought that consolidation would save money for the people. Partial consolidation can be made to the advantage of the town.

Fred M. Goodwillie saw an easy way way out of the difficulty in a plan to abolish several of the boards and then increase the board of selectmen to nine.

C. S. Parker replied that this scheme was started in Woburn, when it had a population of 8,000. Until the town became a city, the plan was followed with less friction and better success than ever before.

Warren W. Rawson said that he had advocated consolidation. He had seen the injury which the town had received from having so many boards. Sewers, water and highways, he thought, ought water and nighways, he thought, ought to come under one head. If they were under one board and one engineer, this board would know at the beginning of the year, when each piece of work was to be done. Now, we have three superintendents, one would do; we have three sets of teams and three stables; one of the latter and two of the fermer would be sufficient. We could get more work done by working the same men in several departments, and thereby keep them busy all the time. Mr. Rawson did not favor including the school or health department in any consolidation.

keep them busy all the time. Mr. Rawson did not favor including the school or health department in any consolidation. Theo, Schwamb thought that the town affairs were not carried on in a business-like fashion. He favored consolidation. Rev. Dr. S. C. Bushnell said that if there had been clashing it had been necessary. In order that there shall be less errors in the future than in the past, some scheme ought to be devised. He favored consolidation. It is simply a question of method.

At this point Mr. Rawson attempted to dispel any idea that there was clashing among the boards.

Alfred Norton entered a plea for a more beautiful town. He thought a plan would be devised for keeping the taxes from mounting higher.

H. A. Freeman believed in bringing under one head or one knowledge the departments, as far as possible. Ine head of each department ought to have a knowledge of what is needed in the other departments.

N. J. Hardy believed in joining the departments.

N. J. Hardy believed in joining the three departments spoken of. The town affairs should be administrated in the same manner in which we carry on our own private business.

On motion of C. S. Parker, a vote of thanks was tendered to Representative Crosby for opening the debate. The meeting then adjourned.

Hannah Richards' Mince Pies.

And How She Electioneered to Have Her Husband Voted In as First Selectman of the

BY HARRY A. HEMINWAY.

Copyright, 1901, by Harry A. Heminway. .

Hannah Richards was certainly eccen tric; her most intimate friends admitted the fact. There were some people who hinted that she was "queer," but the gen eral verdict was that Hannah was "ec centric," and her eccentricities took such various and startling shapes that no one could foretell with any degree of accuracy when, how or where the next mental eruption would manifest itself.

Even Martin, the husband and partner of her joys and sorrows, used to say that he "never saw such a woman in my life, been married nigh on to 40 years, and I don't understand her yet." So it may be inferred that he recognized her peculiar ities as well as those who might reasonably be supposed to know less of her whimsical disposition than he, her lawful

An example of Hannah's eccentricity came to light in the following manner Elder Pratt, who expounded the "word' at the "meeting house," had gently re buked "Sister" Richards for absenting herself from divine services, reminding her that salvation was of more impor tance than weeding out an onion bed. had taken the good man's reproof with becoming humility, and the Elder P. rejoiced in his heart at her apparent sorrow for the transgression. A month or so afterward, upon learning that the worthy man was in dire need of a "tabby" to drive away an invading army of mice, the penitent Hannah graciously volunteered to provide that necessity, for which act of kindness she received the profuse thanks of the clergyman.

A few mornings later, on opening the front door of the parsonage, sure enough, holy man found the "cat" securely tied to the knob. But inasmuch as this one in particular belonged to the "pole' species, the joy of Elder Pratt was some what modified.

By these tokens it will readily be seen that the adjective eccentric fitted Hannah eminently well. But it must be understood with all her curious and at times inesteem by the entire population of Avon orners was she for her supreme ability in preparing that gastronomical delicacy known as mince pie. The name and fame of Hannah Richards' mince pies were extensive, and the exquisite delight experienced in eating a quarter section of her toothsome pastry was equaled by one thing only, to witpartaking of a second Q. S. Certain it was that she realized her worth as applied to pie construction in all its branches and was proud of the reputation she had acquired, as in fact she had very good reason to be. An adept in the various stages of piemaking, from the judicious selection of the crude, raw materials to the finished, delicious product of her skill and wholesome ingredients used, Hannah was, as before stated, fully aware of her culinary accomplishments and gloried in

And Hannah was generous, too; every time she baked a "mess o' pies" those in the neighborhood who were less proficient in the art were afforded an opportunity of determining by the taste whether these "wus better er wuss 'n t'other batch," With these A1 traits to offset her one failing, if being eccentric can be called a failing, we can add that Hannah ssed a will of her own, and, having made up her mind to do a certain thing, she usually succeeded in doing it.

At the time of this writing she had resolved that at the fall election her hus-band should be elected "first selectman." He had already served two years as official "fence viewer" for the town of Avon, and now to round out his career as a public man be coveted still higher honors, and in this instance Martin bad the hearty co-operation of his wife. He had reviously been nominated at the caucus, it the chances of his getting the necessary number of votes were by no means In fact, the constituents of Jones, who beaded the opposite ticket, took it for granted that Martin Richards "stood no show at all."

There were but few "doubtful ones," d as there was no "third party" in the field, Jones' followers claimed his election foregone conclusion. A careful canthe fact that, barring a miracle, Jones ld win by a small majority. No votes could be spared, still he would "get there." Hannah had decided that Mar-tin should be the "chosen one," but how the thing was to be engineered she could not at that time say. If she had any plans for the coming campaign, she kept her

Hannah had figured it out that as there were but 86 voters in the town of Avon, and as at least 48 would cast their ballots or Jones, it would be seen that that no ess than ten votes must be won from the ther side to assure victory; but, again, ow? Hannah was no electioneer, and, not Martin had told her to "let things lone. Guess if the people want me to be sad man of this town they'll vote for me; to use in you're foolin round." The the sager Hannah studied the situation the last confidence she had in her ability to help her husband. There was yet a week before election. Something might be done to enable Martin to wear the crown of victory after all.

If she failed in her effort to bring over ranks of the enemy, might there not be some way to prevent them from voting at

One evening Martin was engaged in converting a well seasoned piece of hick-Hannah's jaws came together with a tonishment. "Now, don't set there gawpin at me Martin Richards; I tell yer it's did, so don't do any more worryin." No amount of questioning could induce her to enlight en him as to how it had been "did." and the wondering candidate went to sleep that night not one jot the wiser.

Bill Bates, the village storekeeper at the "Corners," stood behind his counter endeavoring to subtract a pound of tea and a gallon of kerosene from three dozen of eggs and a sheep pelt when the door opened and Hannah Richards entered.

"Mornin, Mister Bates; nice weather we're havin, ain't it? When yer git done figgerin, I guess yer can put me up et couple er pounds er light brown sugar 'n quarter er pound er allspice 'en some soap three bars. Seems to me I've fergot sunthin now. Oh, yes, now I remember; ain't been feelin very well lately—guess yer can put me up er six ounce er jalap. it's proper good fer er bilious liver."

In reply to the question asked by the storekeeper regarding her opinion as to the result of the approaching election Hannah smiled ambiguously and answeded that she thought it would "be cluss kinder.'

Two days before the event which would show the relative strength of Messrs. Jones and Richards, politically at least, Hannah made up a mighty number of her famous mince pies, and for once the neighbors were not made the recipients of doll which says "mamma." Those who her bounty. Alpheus Hunt's wife confided to Mrs. Wash Daggett, her next door friend, that in her opinion the Richardses "must be expectin a slew of company," and added, in a grieved voice, that she was "afraid Hannah was gettin stingy."

When the afternoon of the day previous to the contest at the polls arrived, Hanneh made Martin hitch up Jenny, the old white mare, and, with a bundle of ample proportions under the buggy seat, drove off, not, however, without curtly telling her husband to mind his own businessguess he knew what she was up to."

"How d'ye do, Mr. Dyer? Nice day: how's Miss Dyer feelin? Made er mess er mince pies yesterd'y 'n thought Mis' Dyer'd relish one. Jes' take it into the house. Ain't got no time to git out. Don't mash the crust now. Tell Mis' Dyer I'll call fer the plate next time I'm Good day. G'long, Jenny."

All that afternoon she drove about the town, and wherever she brought old Jenny to a halt, just so sure did she leave a tribute of her goodness of heart in the form of one, sometimes two, of her favorite pies. Only one strange feature were young. But in those days fathers was attached to her philanthropic pilgrimage on that crisp autumn day-every one of the pies she had so generously dis-tributed had been left at the home of a Jones man. Nary a pie had found its way to any of Martin's henchmen! A peace offering? Maybe; a sort of subtle bribery on Hannah's part. Well, circum. a "flapper"-a strip of heavy leather stances were made apparent afterward from which might be deduced an opinion

Election day arrived at last, clear, back of the culprit was bared, and every stroke of the flapper raised a bilethat the weather was conducive of a "full ballot." But early in the day the faces of Jones and his adherents began to assume an anxious expression. were the Conants-father and sons? They had promised to be on hand early to "muster in" and "talk to" the very few pil's nose was wedged into the cleft. who were open to conviction and had to be shown the folly of their way of thinking. And what had become of the Dyers, and the Kemptons, and the Vinings? Where were they?

Finally Jones sent out three rigs with competent drivers to "round up" the dilatory ones and bring them to the "Corners" forthwith. "Find out what in blazes is the matter with 'em!" he yelled as they drove away. When the scouts returned with the mournful tidings that those they had been sent for were "sick-awful sick with gripes and couldn't get out of the there was deep gloom in the house." hearts of Jones and his allies and corresponding joy in the breasts of the Richards advocates.

The sun went down and with it the lid of the ballot box. When the votes were counted, it was found that Martin Richards. Esq., had been elected to the high and important office of "first selectman" by the narrow margin of six majority.

Bill Bates sat alone in his store the night following the election whittling a clothespin. Suddenly he dropped his knife, smote his thigh vehemently, gave way to a boisterous laugh and said to himself, "I'll bet a red herring I know what Hannah Richards wanted of that six ounces of jalap! Haw, haw, haw!"

Crook's Councils of War.

Crook's councils of war differed from those of any other general, living or dead. He never asked any one for an opinion, never gave one of his own, but, taking his rifle in hand, strolled a short distance away from camp, sat down under a rock, crossed one knee over the other, clasped his arms about his shins and occasionally rubbed the tip of his nose with the back of his right hand. This was the last infallible sign by which the troops afterward learned to know that one of Crook's councils of war was in progress. He communed with himself and canvassed all the pros and cons of his predicament.

Necromancy and Buttery. The word necromancy, for a long time called the black art, was once and is still by some pronounced negro-mancy.

For this there was some reason, since in the old French the word was nigromance, and in the middle Latin nigromantia, but the word is from the Greek nekros (dead) and mantela (divination). The buttery in old fashioned houses was not a place for the storage of butter, but was a room in which bottles, full and empty, were kept. It was in charge of the butter, whose correct title, you know, is "bottler"—one who attends to the wines.

In these schools a boy has a chance to get a thorough education, which even gives him instruction in the languages. In many of the smaller places there are schools, sometimes under the village "pope" or priest, who celebrates mass in the little Greek church in the center of the village. To this church the children are taken every Sunday and often on saints' days as well.—Anna Northend Benjamin.

When Grandpa Was a Boy. Sometimes boys and girls think that their fathers and mothers must have had a much easier time than they in the good old days when "pa" and "ma" and mothers were more strict, and whippings, both for boys and girls, were more plentiful. In her book, "Child Life In Colonial Days," Alice Morse Earle describes one schoolteacher's instruments of torture for pupils as six inches in diameter and with a hole in the middle. This was fastened at scrutable ways she had many good points by those endowed with ordinary perspi-also, and chiefly noted and held in high cacity. the edge to a pliable handle. When this whipping device was used, the ery stroke of the flapper raised a bilster the size of the hole in the leather. Another mode of punishment was to send the pupil out to cut a branch from a tree. The cut end of the branch was then split by the teacher, and the pu-With this mark of disgrace hanging to his nose the pupil was forced to stand in plain view of the rest of the school. Small Anvils.

The anvil that rings to the sturdy blacksmith's sledge may weigh 200, 300 or 400 pounds, but there are anvils whose weight is counted in ounces. These are used by jewelers, silversmiths and various other workers Counting shapes, sizes, styles of finish, and so on, these little anvils are made in scores of varieties, ranging in weight from 15 ounces up to a number of pounds each. All the little anvils are of the finest steel. They are all trimly finished, often nickel plated, and those surfaces that are brought into use are finished with what is called a mirror polish, the surface being made as smooth as glass.

Kicking the Marble.

Here is the game called kicking the marble. The players have two marbles an inch or more in diameter, one of which is put upon the ground and shoved with the foot. The other is put down, and one boy tells the other to put it a certain direction from the other. If he shoves it so as to hit the other and still go in the desired direction, he wins double and is entitled to two kicks. If it simply goes in the position indicated, he wins and is entitled to

IN COLONIAL STYLE.

Nicely Laid Out With Many Artistic Features-Cost, $3,500.

[Copyright, 1901, by George Hitchings, architect, 1090 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn.]

This design is of a colonial style of architecture and is nicely laid out with a center hall 9 feet wide and 28 feet long and with an ornamental grille and seat at rear. There is an open fireplace with a brick mantel. The massive carved platform staircase, with a large art glass window on the landing, is an artistic feature. The parlor is large, 12 feet wide and 15 feet deep, and has a mullion large open fireplace, with an oak mantel and a tile hearth and facing complete.

The dining room is connected to the library by sliding doors. This dining room is a very artistic room, with a large bay window and a window seat, an open fireplace, a Philadelphia faced brick mantel and a large buffet built in. There is also a neat design of parquet flooring. The walls are covered with red burlap, and the ceiling is tinted with a delicate floral decoration. The pantry is fitted with a china closet and a copper pantry sink. The kitchen is provided with all the modern fixtures. The second floor is most conveniently arranged, having a large hall in the center and doors opening to all the rooms. The four large chambers are provided with large closets. The bathroom is fitted with open set fixtures with nickel trimmings, a tile floor and imitation tile wainscoting. The attic contains one finished room for servants and a large open attic for storage. The cellar has a concrete floor, a laundry, servants' water closet and a large fur nace and coal bins.

The foundation is stone, the superstructure frame. The exterior is covered with three coats of Atlantic white lead and pure linseed oil. Dimensionsfront, 35 feet 6 inches; side, 36 feet. Cost to build complete, $3,500.

Turkish Rooms.

The cozy corner that became so horrible a certainty in the average home when oriental art gained its firm place in the hearts of cosmopolitan flatters has been displaced by the Turkish room, a possession more pretentious and more difficult to attain.

For this purpose an entire room must be set apart, a parlor alcove being usually chosen for the purpose. The entire ceiling and walls are draped in tented style, and the appointments and furnish ings are all in keeping with eastern cus toms.

Chandeliers and gas jets are replaced by hanging lamps of jeweled brass or Italian iron, and effects are produced far more pleasing to the eye of the artist than to the careful housewife who knows what dust catchers these oriental hangings are.

While these draped rooms are usually designated and are sometimes used as smoking rooms, they are not adapted for the purpose, the draperies retaining the odors of smoke in a manner most unpleasant to fastidious nostrils .- New York Sun.

Use For Flour Sacks. The strong sacks in which flour come can be utilized in a number of ways for household purposes. It is first necessary to clean them and remove the lettering on them. The printed letters can be taken out by soaking in buttermilk for several hours before washing. The sacks make excellent towels, dishrags, mops and coverings for ironing boards. Those buying their flour in bags will find it of value to save the cloth and put each one away until a pile is collected. There some day when it is convenient wash them out and cut them up into useful articles, hemming the edges for towels or dishrags the same as if the materia had been purchased at the stores. The flour sacking is superior to much of the toweling material, for it is made very strong and durable in the beginning.— New Voice.

Take Care of Floors Bare floors should be wiped daily, but they should be well swept with a hair brush before wiping. Mattings should be swept twice or three times a week. Sweep with a brush and then to over them with a cloth on the broom Salt and water is very good for the matting, but the matting should be rubbed dry after the salt has been used.

Some Arrangements That Combine Originality and Convenience-Beneath the Stairway-A Hall Settle. A Picturesque Corner Chimney.

First impressions of an interior of necessity are gained from the hall. It is for this reason perhaps that special efforts are made to have the hall attractive and, if possible, to incorporate in its furnishing or arrangements some note of originality that will give it a marked individuality of its own. The

It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the "GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE."

This is usually utilized as a place to stow away coats, capes, jackets, rubbers and umbrellas, and such use of it is all right if a proper treatment is given to the front of the opening. Instead of a yawning cavern appearing when one enters the hall, let there be built an attractive partition beneath the stairway that shall inclose By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Charles A. Cushing and Ida E. Cushing, his wife, in her own right, to Nellie M. Farmer, dated March 30th, 1900, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 2807, Page 450, will be sold at public auction upon the premises, for breach of condition of sald mortgage deed on Monday, the 27th day of May, 1901, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely: A certain parcel of land on Appleton street, in said Arlington, with the buildings thereon, and bounded and described as follows, viz: Beginning at the Northerly corner the space to be used for wearing apparel.

The illustration shows one way to do this. A low doorway is made where a curtain can be hung, while about this is fretwork. Two drawers to hold shoes, rubbers, storm hats, capes, etc., are placed in the lowest part of the space, their top serving as a shelf within the closet. In the highest part of the space are hooks for hanging up wearing apparel. The wood should harmonize with the rest of the hall or may be painted if the hall is painted.

When the arrangement of the hall does not permit of a built in seat, and where the floor room is ample, a hall settle is decidedly attractive and also decidedly convenient, if, like the one in the illustration, it has an open space beneath it for the accommodation of rubbers and storm clothing and a drawer where the tennis rackets and balls can be placed when coming in from a game. This settle is simple of construction, but as substantial in appearance as the oak of which it is made. Its lack of fancy ornamentation and carving can be made up by giving it a beautiful surface finish, to which oak wood lends itself so perfectly. Why Live if Not to Learn?-The Tyre anny of the Kitchen Table. If any one were sufficiently courageous to tell the average thrifty housekeeper that she was extravagant, that maligned individual would look at the daring person with horrified amazement; then she would become indignant and would probably "say things" in very emphatic but truly feminine fashion. And yet, resent it as she might, in the majority of cases it would be true.

Money is not the only thing that is worth saving in this world, nor is it the best thing. But the knowledge of this is always tardy in its arrival. A little stopping once in awhile to think and to take account of one's mental, physical and nerve stock will very soon set things to rights, especially if the women will be sensible and think in the right direction, and, above all, if they will dare to be independent of the opinions of other women, who, like themselves, are held down by tradition, and do the right and sensible way even if it is diametrically opposed to "the old way." Why do we live if not to learn? And why is it that innovations are so warmly welcomed in every other branch of labor and so persistently frowned upon in the domestic branch? That is a puzzle I gave up long ago, says a writer in Woman's Home Companion. The only solution that in any way explained it was the bugaboo of American housewives-the fear of being called "shiftless." But that can't be the answer in these days of women's clubs, with their domestic and economic departments. Therefore all such nonsense should be promptly done away

Much of the economy in housekeeping, both of time and strength, de pends upon the conveniences one allows oneself for doing the work. There are so many labor saving devices nowadays that every woman should find positive and permanent relief from many burdens. Take, for example, the kitchen table. By some mysterious and inscrutable law, as immovable to all intents and purposes as those of the Medes and Persians, every table for every kitchen is made of a height corresponding to that of all other tables for all other kitchens, and all the women of the country, tall or short, are expected to work at this table; at least they all accept it as though they were compelled to work at it, and they take it, with all the other housekeeping traditions, without a word of protest or complaint. For the woman whose height it accommodates it is all right, but for the taller one it is all wrong, and it may be so easily righted if one will only stop for a moment and consider what is the trouble.

A New Floor Covering.

The floor covering of bedrooms is entirely a matter of taste. Many object to the hard wood floor even when well covered with rugs. For the country house a foundation of denim for the bedroom floor is excellent, says the New York Tribune. It is as cool and clean as matting, is easily cleaned and has not the odor that accompanies nearly all matting-an odor which many people find objectionable. Rugs show well on the blue denim, particularly the cotton Japanese rugs in blue and drab or blue and white.

Athletics Versus Domestic Science. The critics who disapprove of the athletic young woman on the score that too much attention to athletic games is prejudicial to the acquirement and practice of domestic arts will probably be elated over the news from England that in a menage and means competition conducted by an English journal the papers were so poor that no competitor was deemed worthy of winning even the second prize. Something of the same kind is said to have occurred awhile ago at a military camp near a seaside resort. The young women carried off Ligh honors in tennis, cycling, golf and other sports and spent much time at these games. The men were preparing for a military examination, and it was suggested that the young women submit to a test regarding their knowledge of place until about one and one-half hours prize. Something of the same kind is to a test regarding their knowledge of household lore. Not one passed successfully. Keep Your Children Busy.

Keep your children busy if you would have them happy. When the occupation is some daily labor which has been wisely allotted, see that it is accomplished as well, as it is possible for the child to accomplish it under existing circumstances. But, whether it be in work or play, let him understand that, no matter how well he may have done today-and do not be chary of your praise - he has within himself that which will make it possible for him to do still better tomorrow. This treatment, instead of discouraging, will encourage by inciting the child toward ever better work and will early implant that spirit of divine discontent which allows of no absolute satisfaction in that which has been accomplished until the achievement reaches perfection. This is the discontent which Emerson preaches and which is holy if doubt is not allowed to creep in to mar the aspiration.—Gertrude Okie Gaskell in Woman's Home Companion.

Belles of the Kongo.

The postal authorities at Brussels have lately noticed that the mail bags dispatched to the Kongo were not being duly returned, and after a lot of trouble they discovered the reason. It appears that the colored postmen in the Kongo Free State make presents of the mail bags to their wives or fiancees. These ladies simply cut out the bottom, and by drawing what is left over their heads, and with the assistance of a piece of string, they have an ultra modern ready made costume. The fact that the sacks are furnished with an enormous black seal bearing the legend "Brussels Center" does not disconcert them in the least.-Stockholm Svenska Dagblad.

"Made" Feathers a Hoax.

The Woman's club of Northboro, Mass., appointed a meeting in behalf of the birds just before the time of Easter bonnet shopping. The president, Miss Edith Barnes, made an earnest plea for bird protection and espe cially urged the women not to be coaxed into wearing bird plumage under the delusion that the feathers were "made." Every woman should investigate for herself, she said, and the safe plan was to refuse feather wearing of

A Prize For Servants.

At Guilford, England, the quaint custom of throwing dice for the "maid's money" was observed recently. A sum was invested by a mayor of the borough in the seventeenth century, from which $60 is given annually to a servant girl for good repute who has been in the same service for over two years. There were two applicants. The prize was won by Martha Shingler, who threw seven. The same dicebox has been used for 60 years.-London Teletown, while whole shing es could be seen sailing through the air for a distance of many hundred yards.

It is fortunate for the town that the day was rainy, for had it been dry, many other fires would have been started. It is more than likely that heavy losses would have resulted from the 'sparks. The rain, however, saved the day.

The fire called forth a general alarm in Arlington, while apparatus from Belmont and Cambridge assisted. The departments did good work, and it is a credit to them that the damage was not heavier.

credit to them that the damage was not heavier.

The fire started in the paint shop at the easterly end of the ice house. It was caused by the backing of a wagon, knocking over a stove, by a workman, who has charge of repairing the wagons. He had a very narrow escape, as he was hemmed in before he knew that the place was burning.

An alarm was rung in about 2.15 and it was not till after 5 o'clock that the fire was under control. The fire swept to the west and caught on to the ice house adjoining the paint shop. The flames had excellent material to work on, for the roof of the ice house was covered with hay.

In the house were 12.000 tons of ice, which was greatly damaged, making it impossible to use it. It was through the heroic efforts of the firemen that the stable on the north was saved, as the flames caught on it a few times.

Treasurer Kimball said the loss was total. In the paint shop at the time were some five teams, which were also burned.

The building was about thirty feet high and 50 yards long. It had a pitch roof.

Several New Gifts.

The Arlington Historical society held its annual meeting, Tuesday evening, in Pleasant hall. The first business of the hour was the electron of the following officers: President, George Y. Wellington vice presidents. E. Nelson Blake James P. Parmenter and Frank W. Hodgdon; secretary, Frederick E. Fowle; treasurer, Warren A. Peirce; directors at large, Mrs. S. G. Damon, Mrs. Margaret L. Sears and Miss E. W. Hodgdon.

James A. Bailey read an interesting paper, giving the history of the old saw factory. The old firm of Welch & Grifnths started this concern in 1832, and somewhere about 1848 the late James A. E. Bailey became a member of the company James A. Bailey, the speaker of the evening, was made a member of the firm in 1863, and became superintendent of the factory in 1872. Mr. Bailey began work in the factory in 1861, a half century ago.

The speaker gave an interesting ac-dent of the factory in 1872. Mr. Bailey began work in the factory in 1851, a h.; century ago.

The speaker gave an interesting account of the saw industry as carried on in England and in this country, and it must not be forgotten that the saw factory on what was then called High street was the first to introduce the manufacturing of saws in this country. The business was sold in the later eighties to persons in Atlanta, Ga.

The vote of the society was extended Mr. Bailey for his interesting paper.

Mrs. L. P. Bartlett presented the society with a cartridge box, dating back to 1832. It gave out its nowder on the occasion of President Jackson's visit east. A gift came from Mr. Thomas Grav in the shape of a china pitcher, manufactured at his place of business in 1892 in Boston. His pottery business is the first in all New England in that line of manufacturing. A catalogue of Catting academy for the vears 1858-59 was also presented the society.

The society is getting together a valuable collection of the old time Arlington. A vote of thanks was extended Mrs. S. G. Damon for her efficient work as secretary of the society.

VERDICT OF $5,000.

A sealed verdict, which was opened Thursday in the Middlesex superior civil court, East Cambridge, before Judge Hardy, awarded David E. Belleau, of Arlington, $000 in his suit for personal damages against the Boston Elevated al damages against the Boston Elevated Rallway company.

Mr. Belleau was a passenger on an outward-bound car about three o'clock a.m., July 5, 1900. The car left Adams square, Boston, and proceeded to the temporary West Boston bridge. While making the first turn on the bridge the car left the track and brought up short against the ralling of the bridge, represented the plaintiff, who claimed that he received injuries to his spine. The suit was for $5,000. The jury awarded the full amount.
